MONDAY MORNING MARCH 16 CHINESE SUGAR CANE IN TEXAS .- Mr. Geo. W. Kendal editor of the New Orleans Pica-COMMISSION & FORWARDING yune has a farm at New Braunfels, in Texas, and in a letter to his partners gives the following as his experience of the new sugar cane

> in that region: In October, 1855, I purchased in Paris a small paper of the seed. I do not think there was more than two heaping table spoonsful of it, or three at the outside. I brought it with me to New Orleans, and on arriving sent it here to be planted. When I reached this place, early in May last, it was just peering above the ground, two rows of it in a ten acre field, which had been devoted in the main to millet, oats, and a little Indian corn, and four short rows in our garden-the latter planted last. About the 8th of July the two rows in the larger field had shot up, headed out and ripened, notwithstanding the drought, and the heavy heads were cut for seed. The oats meanwhile had not come up, the millet was hardly above ground, while the Indian corn either side were still standing. On close examination, I ascertained that a lot of hogshogs are apt to do such things-had broken into the field, and devoured the Chinese sugar cane root and branch; it was cut clean to the ground by the porkers, not a sign or vestige was left, while, as already stated, the LACOUR'S ESSENTIAL OILS. stocks of the common Indian corn on either These Oils are obtained by Distillation at the Chemical Side were left standing. I was thankful I had

Some few days after this-perhaps a fortnight—the rows planted in the garden were a seperior imitation of Imposted Brandies, vist Otard, examined, the heads of seed found to be ripe, Find South America, for 23 CENTS PER ward Proprietors. I now became more interested in the Sorgho Sucre than ever, and although I still fed out daily to the merinoes and mares, left a hip them a package of the Oils. SULLIVAN turn blossomed and ripened as did the first .-I kept no account of dates, but think this third crop of seed from the same stalk, if so, I may call it was gathered about the first of October; it might have been during the second week of that month. I planted some of this last seed, by way of experiment; it came up rapidly, looked thrifty, grew until it was nearly knee high, and was finally cut down by frost in November. A great number of shoots or suckers, which had sprung up from the stalks first planted were cut down at the same WILLIAM GAY, Esq.: Messrs. A. to the ground. And what amount of seed do you think I gathered from the little paper I purchased in Paris? Nearly, if not quite two bushels! Flour, Meat, and all corts of Western Produce, and for and had not the hogs broke into the field, I everything for dry weather.

Of its properties for the production of sugar, I can say nothing; I only know that it tastes like the common sugar cane, and is full of juice about the time the first heads ripen. As a green todder it also beats everything which grows, horses, sheep, and hogs are certainly inordinately fond of it, and so full are the stalks of saccharine matter, that they must be both nutritious and fattening. I cannot say what kind of bread or cakes the seed will afford, nor can I tell what kind of dry fodder the plant will make when cut green; these experiments I have yet to try, and now Commission and Forwarding Merchants that I have the seed I intend to do it on a grand scale. I shall plant it in rows, or drills NEW ORLEANS. La. shall sow it and shall cut it at different stagaberalcash advances will be made on consignments es to try its qualities as a dry fodder. Let me repeat over and over again, that it stands adrought better than auvthing we havedoes not seem to require rain after it is once up. Yours, &c. G. W. K.

PHILOSOPHY OF WETTING BRICK .- Limo morter acts as a bond with brick by adhesion, the vehicle being the moisture or water of the year for building brick houses. In warm dry weather the moisture of the mor ar evaporates too rapidly and in frosty weather it crystalizes, and when thawed it sweats out.

Mortar becomes hard by absorbing carbonic structs opposite the old acid from the atmosphere; and it acquires by age the character of stone. Without moissor ment in the city of ture it will not become hard and solid, but Stoves, Castings, Mantle and Jamb Grates, venting the rapid evaporation of moisture in crumble into dust, hence the necessity of premortar used in building of brick or stone.
